

THE PETERS PLAYERS

The Peters Players are a small theatre group, founded over 40 years ago and based at Old Windsor, England.

Director's Note:

I first saw a write up of the School of Rock and Roll on the Internet 18 months ago, offering no royalties for staging the play. I contacted the author, Susan Moore, and after batting a few emails between us, the script was adjusted and tonight you will see the final result. I trust our presentation is as the author intended, as this is the most challenging production that I have directed.

Dilwyn Bright.

Author's Note

This is a story I have wanted to tell for many years and I will forever be in debt to Dilwyn Bright and the Peters Players for taking on an 'unknown' play and playwright. To find a theatre group that is prepared meet the challenge of performing a new play and giving it life is one of the hardest things that I have ever done.

The script is longer than the version that will be performed by the Peters Players, with various options to adapt scenes, staging and music, so that each director can create a new play to suit the range of performers ability and size of stage.

I hope the play will travel far and that this is just the beginning and maybe – just maybe - it will evolve on the screen. The rehearsals and interviews with some of the real life characters are being filmed by film maker, Bob Hodge, Teesdale Films.
